Excerpt: ... LETTER T O T H t Reverend Mr. D Rev. Sir, A S, of late, I have not attended upon your ministry so constantly as heretofore; and as I have some ground to think that you judge me to be guilty of a fault, in absenting myself, you will permit me to assign a reason in justification of my conduct. F 3 You You are very sensible, Sir, that you and I differ very much in our religious opinions; so much, indeed, that I have heard you declare, that a person who thinks as I do, is, on that account, excluded from salvation. Such a declaration, however, affects me but little; knowing well, that the great and good God hath never so declared; and therefore esteeming the sentence of any frail and fallible man, as a thing of little moment. Tho, by. the way, it seems no trifling affair, with respect to the person himself, who places himself in the seat os judgment, and pronounces. nounces condemnation on his brother for his opinions. This man had need look well to his authority. And how if, in the end, it should appear that the party so condemned, is one whom God approves? But, to return:--The wide difference in cur sentiments, of necessity, prevents my gaining that profit from your ministry, which I would heartily wish to gain: and thus die principal design of public worship is defeated. How should I be profited by what I.. am flocked and grieved to hear? By that which the reverence which I owe to the ever blested F 4 God God obliges me to regard with abhorrence? That at which I am really ashamed to be shocked and grieved no morei as, indeed, I should be, if I had such a sense of God upon my mind as I ought to have. Yet altho I think so ill of your tenets, considered in themselves, believing your Jincerity unquestionable, I do, at the same time, account you a gOod and a...
